

In Session 2 of Artist to Watch, GJD's Ken Volpe continues riffing with Willem Hartong the guitarist, singer and songwriter of the trio Breaking Laces based in Brooklyn, NY. Breaking Laces has been together for three years and is enjoying success from the constant touring, recording and the simple application of proverbial "elbow grease." This month Breaking Laces won the Starbucks Music Makers Competition after being selected from over 4,000 bands. The band will embark on another UK tour come January of 2008 with a new album and nationwide tour to follow.

Ken and Willem discuss his influences on the guitar and the artists he admires most. Next, the conversation turns to the band and how they formed and how they've made their way through the maze of the music industry. Willem goes on to discuss Breaking Laces European tour and how the music scene is so much different there than it is in the US.
